

THE SHARROCK HOME is in Hidesbrook, New York. The studio, a renovated stable, the Capetani studio, wooden gods, and a prize possession like him, is a house of paradise—African domain masks, stream bed, a witch's like genuine root collar, alone, which Sharrock and his wife inspect.

THEIR VEGETABLE GARDEN is large enough to provide for the Sharrock needs. Some of Sharrock's investigations have given him a new-found character. This is how he really lives.

THESE SUMMER was on their way when Mrs. Sharrock found them in the garden. She took them in, raised them with an eye-dropper; they rank second only to their finger-spans.

SHARROCK RENTS an empty, circular office to do his writing, which is now his prime interest. Author of Applaud, Witchcraft, and other books, he has just completed his autobiography.
